

Mr. Blaz Golob is a chairman of Ljubljana Forum on Future of Cities. As a country manager for Slovenia at Heliot Europe and entrepreneur, together with his team, he provides IoT digital solutions for various industries and utility companies with special focus on logistics and smart city services and products. With his start-up company he co-created digital platforms being used by various European cities, helping them to manage data more efficiently. He uses foresight tools to design new concepts, business models, products and services for reaching Sustainable Development Goals with digital transformation. As a researcher and former employee of the European Commission, he co-founded Foresight Europe Network which is today an active part of the Millennium Project leading global foresight think-tank.