

Marko Peterlin is a co-founder and a director at IPoP – Institute for Spatial Policies, Ljubljana, Slovenia, a non-profit organization supporting communities towards sustainable urban development. He aims to strengthen the environment for resilient communities. In 2009 he initiated a national network of NGOs active in urban development, which he coordinates since. He is also part of URBACT, a Europe-wide knowledge sharing programme for cities. Since 2011 he coordinates Jane's Walks in Slovenia, citizen-led walking conversations inspired by Jane Jacobs. He writes for various newspapers and blogs, speaks and facilitates debates at conferences, seminars, workshops.